

Like Lovers in a Painting

We lie in each other's arms still as the yellowing leaves on our lawn in a windless twilight of gold, gold like the thinning bands on our fingers.

With memories ticking like the clock from another room we are still, like I am listening for your breath in the chill of early morning.

- Celia Piehl